IT IS NOT ONLY THE GATEWAY TO ANGOLA BUT ALSO LINKS THE REMOTE AND DESOLATE NORTHWEST REGION (ARID EDEN ROUTE) TO THE LUSH WATER ECOSYSTEM OF THE FOUR RIVERS ROUTE (KAVANGO & ZAMBEZI REGIONS). The route is the quintessential oasis for weary travellers and serves as a practical stop-over for to refuel and restock in the heart of a bustling African community. Travellers will experience traditional and contemporary Ovambo culture alongside each other and get a glimpse of local tribal royalty. ## DID YOU KNOW?

The Cuvelai-Etosha River Basin is located in the north central regions of Namibia, but originates in Angola. Most of the water travels in shallow ephemeral watercourses known as oshanas and end up in the Etosha Pan.

In about 1550, the people referred to collectively as the 'Aawambo' moved southwards from the Great Lakes in East Africa and settled between the Kunene and Okavango Rivers. Today, the area is known as Owambo Land (north central Namibia) and represents nearly half of the total population of Namibia.

"Efundja" is the Ovambo word for flood and refers to the seasonal floods that occur annually when water from Angola's Cuvelai River Basin fills the entire areas' oshanas with water.

In 2012, scientists found over 5-billion cubic meters of water within the Cuvelai-Etosha Delta (Northern Namibia and Angola). The aquifer is said to be more than 200 metres deep and can supply water for a further 400 years at present consumption levels.

In the pre-colonial structure of Owambo society there was a king and his headmen in each of the 7 Owambo groups (Ondonga, Uukwanyama, Ongandjera, Uukwambi, Ombalantu, Uukwaluudhi and Uukolonkandhi). The king always had the last say.

The Oshigambo River (also Ekuma River) links Lake Oponono and the Cuvelai Delta with the Etosha Salt Pan. This river is an ephemeral river and rarely carries surface water.

Natural salt pans are flat expanses of ground covered with salt and other minerals. Usually shining white under the sun, these pans are found in desert areas. Namibia contains a vast array of salt pans, the largest being the Etosha salt pan that is protected as part of the Etosha National Park.

The Etosha Pan covers a total area of 4730km<sup>2</sup> and developed through tectonic plate activity over about ten million years.

southward from Angola towards the Etosha salt pan. Travellers will enjoy the feeling of a rural landscape interspersed with a bustling urban landscape. Those with a keen interest in Namibia's recent history can enjoy attractions such as the Outapi War Museum, Ombalantu Baobab Museum and the Eenhana Shrine.

1 RUACANA FALLS

Ruacana Falls is located near Ruacana on the Kunene River in Northern Namibia. The waterfall is 120m high and 700m wide in full flood. It is among the largest waterfalls in Africa, both by volume and width. The Ruacana area boasts some beautiful rock formations, with rich textured colouring the landscape and contrasting the lush river with the arid desert to the south. The landscape is further complemented by an array of trees, including the regal baobab, acacia and fever tree. Spectacular sunsets and a wonderful array of birdlife form part of the Ruacana area. To access the falls, travellers need to head towards the border post with Angola, notify the officials that they are visiting the falls and then proceed through to the car park. It should be noted that the parking area is often littered and not well maintained. In addition, due to the hydropower station, the falls are not in full flood for most of the year round.

2 OMBALANTU BAOBAB TREE HERITAGE CENTRE

'Omukwa waaMbalantu' – the tree of life, as the people of Ombalantu know their baobab tree, played a significant role in local history. The hollow trunk of this huge tree has, at various times, been used as a hideout, a post office, a chapel, and was integrated into the South African military base. The tree can accommodate up to 30 people. Information displays in front of the tree's entrance give a short overview of the tree's diverse history, its role in the Owambo community and the struggle for independence from South Africa in North Central Namibia. The centre also has a renovated 'Koffeehuys' (coffee shop), built and used by the South Africans during the colonial times. The craft shop offers a wide range of wire products, from replicas of the baobab tree to wire giraffes, but also traditional Owambo baskets and clay pots. In the shadow of the baobab tree, travellers will find the ideal spot for a picnic at any time of the day. The kiosk offers barbeque grills for rent and wood for sale to have your own private 'braai' under the tree. For travellers who like to relax after a well-prepared meal, the centre features four private camp sites, each with its own 'braai' place and water tap and communal ablution facilities.

3 OUTAPI WAR MUSEUM

Outapi War Museum is located underground in the former South African Amy Base situated within Outapi, previously known as "Ohatopi". The base was built in 1975 and became home to thousands of South African conscripts stationed on the border during the War on Independence, which lasted from 1966 until 1989, making it one of Africa's longest conflicts. The museum contains a conference hall, Internet café, bed-and-breakfast accommodation, refreshment area with a restaurant, gymnasium with a swimming pool as well as a display featuring war material.

4 EENHANA MEMORIAL SHRINE

Eenhana is the capital town of the Ohangwena Region on the border of Angola. Before Namibian independence it was a military centre of the South African Defence Force without public infrastructure. It was proclaimed a settlement in 1992 and a town in 1999. The name Eenhana comes from the word 'calves' in the Oshikwanyama language and is a reference to the calves that used to drink at the small water pan where Eenhana is now located. Eenhana is the location of at least five mass graves of SWAPO resistance fighters that date back to the Namibian War of Independence from South Africa. In 2008 the government built the Eenhana Memorial Shrine for the lives lost in the liberation struggle.

1 OMUGULUGWOMBASHE NATIONAL MONUMENT

Omugulugwombashe is a settlement in the Omusati region in the north of Namibia and is one of the sites of the War on Independence. On 26 August 1966, eight helicopters of the South African Defence Force attacked guerrilla fighters at Omugulugwombashe. This was the first armed battle to be fought on Namibian soil since the South African government colonised Namibia. In 1996, the Namibian government erected a monument in honour of this battle at the 30th anniversary of the start of the conflict. In commemoration of the day, August 26 is a public holiday in Namibia. It is recognised by the United Nations as "Namibia Day" but Namibians refer to it as "Heroes' Day". The memorial shrine bears the inscription, "Independence from Colonialism was our Aim."

2 UUKWALUUDHI ROYAL HOMESTEAD

One of the seven traditional kingdoms of Owamboland is Uukwaluudhi. The royal homestead lies within view of the Tsandi village, about 100km from Oshakati on the D3612 road. It affords travellers the incredible opportunity of experiencing the ways and traditions of Owambo imperial families. King Taapopi reigns in this area and has ploughed back into his local community by encouraging local youths to be trained as tour guides through the Namibia Community-Based Tourism Association. Travellers can relive traditional African royalty with tours through the homestead and traditional meals may be served if requested in advance with entertainment in the form of singing and dancing. The homestead has a small display at the entrance providing details of the history and culture of the Kingdom of Uukwaluudhi. Visitors are provided with a guided tour of the traditional homestead of King Taapopi (who now lives in a house built next door) who will occasionally meet and talk to travellers.

3 UUKWAMBI KINGS MONUMENT / UUKWANYAMA KINGDOM

Elim is a village in the north central Namibia, located approximately 30km west of Oshikati, and is the centre of the Uukwambi traditional authority. The Monument for the Uukwambi Kings is located within Elim and was erected upon the grave of the 16th king, King Nuuyoma.

4 ONGULA CULTURAL VILLAGE

Ongula Cultural Village is strategically situated between Ondangwa (one of the oldest towns in the northern region) and Eenhana, built alongside an active Owambo Homestead. Ongula provides visitors an introduction into the traditional lifestyle of the Owambo people as well as opportunity to participate in the preparation of local traditional drinks and meals. Travellers can discover the art of basket weaving and pottery and explore the beauty of the region. Four en-suite rondavels provide accommodation for overnight guests and traditional meals are served alongside European cuisine. Day tours to the museum, open air craft markets and tribal houses are available and visitors can attend some of the seasonal events such as Marula Festival and traditional weddings.

5 NAKAMBALE MUSEUM

In 1868 Finnish missionary Martti Rautanen left for Namibia. He arrived in Olukonda two years later and spent the rest of life there. He became known as Nakambale, “the one who wears a hat”, among the locals. The mission house is now the Nakambale Museum and one of the best places to experience Owambo culture. The museum lies in the village of Olukonda, 14km south-west of Ondangwa and includes the original church and a traditional Ngonga Homestead. Rautanen translated the Bible and hymns into Ndonga and was a keen student of the indigenous culture. He made meteorological observations, worked in botanical research and became a respected personality in Namibia as well as Finland, receiving an honorary doctorate at the University of Helsinki. The museum displays items from the Finnish Mission Station as well as items of Ovambo history and culture.

6 LAKE OPONONO WETLANDS

Lake Oponono is a large wetland that is fed by underground river channels known as the Culevai oshanas. After the rainy season, visitors can view a variety of birdlife, including saddlebill storks, crowned cranes, flamingos and pelicans. The edge of the lake is located 27km south of Ondangwa.

7 ETOSHA NATIONAL PARK – KING NEHALE GATE

At just over 500 square kilometres, King Nehale is a relatively small conservancy, yet one with a large population of around 20,000 residents. Most people in the conservancy speak Oshiwambo. Eight main Owambo traditional authorities or kingdoms are widely-recognised and the residents of King Nehale Conservancy live within the Ondonga Kingdom. The conservancy is named after the late King Nehale Iya Mpingana, signifying the importance of the traditional leadership. The King Nehale Gate in the northern border of Etosha was officially opened in 2003 and allows visitors the opportunity to combine the natural wonders of Etosha with the cultural vibrancy of Owambo.

8 OMBUPUPU POND AND OKAHAO BAOBAB HERITAGE SITE

Okahao held great importance within the local Ongandjera Kingdom. Okahao Village was a place of magic, or “iinonoma” because of the Ombupupu pond. Permission to use its water had to be sought from the ancestors. The pond was also used as a ballot box for the election of a new Ongandjera king. Candidates would search within the pond for a hidden clay pot and the victor was nominated as the new king of the Ongandjera Kingdom.

An iconic baobab tree has become a heritage site dedicated to those who lost their lives during the War of Independence. It has various attractions, including a craft shop, restaurant and camping facilities.
